Pay Attention by Your Dad

Peter's daughter is getting married today. He can't go because he lives in Seattle and his daughter lives in Alabama. Because Peter has an anoxic brain injury, he can't "risk" the upset in his neurophysiology. Every Father wants to be at his daughter's wedding. Yes, they'll FaceTime or something like that but how do you connect with the emotions? We decided he'd write a book with me and so we did.

Here are some of the highlights. If you'd like a pdf of it, just email me - beth@bethlord.com.

Congratulations to the bride and groom!

I give you these clay pieces created by me. The glaze turned out pretty good, and both pieces were on exhibition in one of the brain injury art events celebrating creativity.

I give you this book about me that serves as your jumping off point in your future life as husband and wife. I am one of the backdrops that provide your movement forward ~ shimmering and sparkling as you are because this wedding day is yours. I celebrate it with you in happiness, joy, and love. I am excited to be a part of this day. Read More
